Jane Friedman Tracks KDP Report Changes

Jane Friedman's November 4 links roundup reports that authors are seeing drops in Amazon KDP page-read reports after the Kindle+ switch, alongside supply chain disruptions this holiday season. The post gathers these developments as recent news for authors who earn a living from books.

A seller of low content books can treat the page-read question as a prompt to check how a planner or journal is described and priced in the KDP dashboard, since the reporting change may alter what a title appears to earn. A monthly budget planner sold as a paperback is one product worth reviewing against the new figures before planning the next release.
